1. Abstract

In recent years, scheduling problems have been advantageously modele Constraint Satisfaction Problems (CSPs) and effectively solved using cons processing techniques. We discuss here one such application: the assignme graduate teaching assistants (GTAs) to courses in a university setting. We an and model this problem using data from the Department of Computer Scienc Engineering of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Our research contribution